

K-12 Educators:

Earn a certificate in Social Emotional Teaching and Learning from The University of Pennsylvania!

Graduate School of Education
PennGSE
Penn Literacy Network

The Penn Literacy Network is offering a 3 course sequence to earn a Certificate in for K-12 Educators in Social Emotional Teaching and Learning in the Trauma Informed Classroom.

Program Description:

PLN's Social Emotional Teaching and Learning certificate will provide three 4.5-credit courses and a certificate from the University of Pennsylvania's Graduate School of Education through the Penn Literacy Network. The courses are focused on the implications of engaged teaching and learning on the brain, social and emotional teaching and learning in the trauma informed classroom and mindfulness for teachers and their students. The overarching goal for the certificate program would be to offer a unique, credit-bearing program that can support all educational staff, school mental health professionals and those working in after school programs.

Upon completion of these hybrid courses (in person and online), participants earn 13.5 continuing education graduate credits and a certificate of completion in Social and Emotional Teaching and Learning.

Courses Included in this Certificate:

- PLN 12C: The Social Emotional Brain - Implications for the Trauma Informed Classroom (EDCE624)
- PLN 32: The Impact of Brain-based Learning Processes- Forming & Reforming Reading, Writing, and Talking Across the Curriculum (EDCE631)
- PLN 11B: Re-Energizing Our School Communities- Mindfulness-Based Strategies to Support Teaching and Learning (EDCE 654)
